

Health and wellness after cancer

“You are cancer-free!”
“There’s no sign of the tumor!”
“The scan is clear!”

These are the words every cancer patient wants to hear. Now what? Life changed when the doctor said the word “cancer.” And it will probably never go back to the way it was before the diagnosis. Not only is the body different but a survivor’s outlook changes too. People ask us all the time, “Now what do I do?” Often the answer is about finding a new normal for you and your family. Almost everyone learns something about themselves and those close to them when cancer hits. After treatment is over, they want to know how to prevent a recurrence and, in general, how to live a healthier life.

It will soon be standard practice for every cancer patient to receive a survivorship plan from their physician. In addition to a list of procedures and medications that the patient received during treatment, the plan will likely include recommendations for the patient to get regular exercise, eat healthy, avoid tobacco, and watch their weight. We all know these things are good for us but the threat of cancer coming back motivates us like never before. It’s common for patients to experience lingering effects of their disease and treatment. Fatigue is one of the most frequent side effects of many cancer therapies and more than 100 studies have shown that survivors who participate in exercise programs report decreased levels of fatigue. Exercise and weight loss can also improve a patient’s quality of life and even enhance the body’s functioning. Additionally, studies suggest that exercise may benefit cognitive function, lifting what some call chemo-fog and improving thinking and short-term memory.

Cancer Services has recently expanded its wellness programs to include weekly sessions of tai chi, yoga and stretching. The sessions are led by qualified instructors who understand that cancer survivors may come with a variety of abilities and energy levels. The small class size allows for individual instruction and the chance to meet and interact with other survivors who understand the cancer experience. Peer support and new friendships are another great by-product of the exercise classes.

Experts often recommend a diet rich in fruits, vegetables and whole grains as a prudent approach to improving health and reducing the risk of recurrence. Nevertheless, eating healthy can be confusing.

That’s where Cancer Services’ nutritionist, Sue Delagrang, R.D., can help. In addition to monthly nutrition classes, Sue is also available for private, no cost consultations with Cancer Services’ clients. People with pre-existing conditions such as diabetes or heart disease can find her advice particularly helpful. The lending library at Cancer Services also has a variety of cookbooks and nutrition information that can help a family learn new recipes and cooking techniques.

Studies have proven many times over the benefits of lifestyle changes in diet and exercise but that doesn’t make them easy. That’s where Cancer Services comes in. The Survivor Academy is a set of programs, including exercise classes, nutrition workshops and educational experiences, which give cancer survivors the tools needed to make positive changes. Drop in on a tai chi or yoga class. Find out why stretching literally feels so good. Sign up for a nutrition class and pick up some new recipes. Everyone is welcome.

Congratulations, you are a survivor! Cancer Services is here to help with what comes next.

Young people who care...

Last week, Alex Alderdice stopped by Cancer Services with her grandmother, Ellen Graham. She was carrying a box of eight beautifully wrapped, hand-made prayer shawls for people fighting cancer. Each shawl includes this heartfelt note from Alex:

“I am 15 years old. I am just an ordinary girl who wants to spread the love of Jesus. Just one month ago, my mom died from breast cancer. She had her own prayer shawl. I decided to make these prayer shawls in honor of her. I pray they give peace and comfort in Jesus’ name.”

Alex knows cancer affects the whole family. If you know someone who would like to receive one of Alex’s prayer shawls, please ask a client advocate.

July 12 through September 27, 2016

Facilitated by Sarah Creason and Gail Hamm, MSW, LCSW, COSW
This 12-week workshop series is open to everyone regardless of whether or not you have participated in a previous Artist's Way class. The workshops are about discovering and recovering your creative self. The focus will be on art journaling and self-healing.

You should bring the following materials to class: A copy of the book "The Artist's Way" by Julia Cameron (You can purchase one through Cancer Services for $10) and a sketchbook (we suggest an 8 1/2 x 11 spiral bound). You may also want to bring markers, colored pencils and a black pen.

The group is open to those with a cancer diagnosis and their caregivers before, during and after treatment.

SAVE THE DATE! Blue Ball Open—August 5

Kent Hormann, organizer of the Blue Ball Open presenting a $15,000 donation from the 2015 event to Cancer Services. The gift was used to fund services and support for men living with prostate cancer.

The annual Blue Ball Open, the popular golf outing to raise awareness about prostate cancer, will be held Friday, August 5, 2016 at Cedar Creek Golf Club.

Cancer Services of Northeast Indiana has achieved Gold level status with GuideStar. The designation is a testament to Cancer Services' deep commitment to transparency and good stewardship of donors' investment in helping people with cancer.

The joy of found money

Remember that time you put on a coat you hadn't worn in a long time and found money in the pocket? Did it make you smile? Did you laugh aloud even though you were alone? Isn't it fun to stumble across a windfall that lets you do something you have been wanting to do?

A donor-advised fund can be like that. If you have opened a charitable gift fund at a community foundation or an investment firm, such as Fidelity, Vanguard or Schwab, you likely have money sitting in an account waiting to be found.

It's not unusual for people to forget money that they have earmarked for charitable giving. These funds are usually started when a donor decides to set aside a certain amount, maybe at tax time. But the joy doesn't happen until you reach in that pocket and find the money. A smile and happy feeling come when you decide to actually make a charitable gift and send the funds to an organization close to your heart.

At Cancer Services that smile happens all over again when your donation gives a woman that perfect wig, or makes sure a widower has a ride to his chemo treatment.

Have you set aside some money waiting to be found?
